Abstract

This article presents an analysis for the first time from the standpoint of new directions of linguistics an attempt was made to study comprehensively verbal markers of anthropocentrism in discourse. The aim of the thesis is to identify verbal markers of anthropocentrism in literary discourse, based on semantic-stylistic, communicative-pragmatic, cognitive, cultural, psychological characteristics of the discursive personality of the author and personage. Accordingly, in the article: a new approach has been applied to the analysis of literary discourse from the standpoint of the methodological principles of anthropocentrism, interdisciplinarity and integrity; the distinctiveness of literary discourse has been defined as one of the most complex types of communication -literary and cognitive, the subjects of which are the author and the personage; the provision on anthropocentrism of literary discourse being manifested in the discursive personality of the author and character was grounded; level parameterization of the linguocreative discursive personality of the author and the character from the standpoint of their semantic-stylistic, communicative-pragmatic, cognitive, cultural, and psychological characteristics has been carried out.
